1 A system of theology that teaches that for humans to have genuine, free fellowship with God, the person's decision must be a volitional choice that is genuinely free. If it is truly free, God cannot know what that choice will be; hence, openness adherents teach that God does not know all future events, nor does He control them.

2 A system of theology that finds in the Gospel a call to free people from political, social, and material oppression.

3 A system of theology that teaches that through right thinking and positive speaking, people can express their faith through their spoken words, thereby claiming and receiving health and wealth.
